"Science has a token of freedom that motivates scientists to study all logical possibilities that may explain the world. His monograph combines a deep understanding and broad insight into 20th century physics and modern biological science; in so doing, he forces a reappraisal of this hoary epistemological dilemma. #101Los Angeles, CA 90036Tel: (323) 525 1948Fax: (323) 525 0266Email: newmastodon@earthlink.net Founded in 1856 this store offers one of the largest selections of foreign language books in North America. Any short statement does not do justice to such a scholarly work. The work is a scholarly consideration of science and philosophy that brings biology into the central role in unifying the whole. Most importantly, it makes you think."—E. And his sense of wonder and befuddlement at shop worn enigmas like the double slit experiment, Bell's theorem, non-locality and Schrödinger's cat is as infectious as it is delightful ... I very much like what Lanza has to say in Biocentrism."— Midwest Book Review Endorsements for Robert Lanza's essay on which Biocentrism is based: "For several days now I have read and reread your article and thought about it. If you're looking for imported German books and music, Die Bücherstube website is for you. "It's a masterpiece—truly a magnificent essay. Like 'a brief history of time' it is indeed stimulating and brings biology into the whole. His article demands an answer to the question of whether scientists have exhausted all possible tools for studying nature. Just as we now know that the sun doesn't really move but we do (we are the active agents), so you are suggesting that we are the entities that give meaning to the particular configuration of all possible outcomes we call reality. All of science is based on information passing through our consciousness, but science hasn't the foggiest idea what consciousness is, and it can't explain the linkage between subatomic states and observation by conscious observers. Lanza proposes a biocentrist theory which ascribes the answer to the observer rather than the observed. 'A New Theory of the Universe' takes into account all the knowledge we have gained over the last few centuries, and correlates them to our own beings, placing in perspective our biologic limitations that have impeded our understanding of greater truths surrounding our existence and the universe around us. Don't let the antiquated look of the site fool you, they've got what you need. The book will appeal to an audience of many different disciplines because it is a new way of looking at the old problem of our existence. Quite the opposite. Its website is also a little old school but it's easy to navigate and find what you need. This new theory is certain to revolutionize our concepts of the laws of nature for centuries to come."—Anthony Atala Atala is an internationally recognized scientist, and the W.H. Boyce Professor, Chair, and Director of the Wake Forest Institute for Regenerative Medicine at the Wake Forest University School of Medicine. Professor Berry is a member (and recent Home Secretary) of the prestigious National Academy of Sciences, or its affiliates Book Biocentrism by Robert Lanza pdf By Robert Lanza with Bob Berman How Life and Consciousness are the Keys to Understanding the True Nature of the Universe Download your book Even though large bookstores have for the most part shut down in America there are still many independent bookstores. "I found the attack on physics to be pretty compelling ... Lanza's theories [are] certainly worth debate."— Houston Chronicle's Eric Berger, SciGuy blog "What makes this book both interesting and worth the effort of reading it; is the unique perspective Lanza brings to the subject matter as a physician. If you can't find what you're looking for in their extensive digital stack just send them an email. "It is genuinely an exciting piece of work. I cannot speak for NASA or other NASA scientists, but personally I look forward to hearing a more detailed explanation of this biocentric view of the Universe from Dr. Lanza."—David Thompson Thompson is an astrophysicist at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center. A book that expands upon this unique approach is warranted, not only to alert society, but to call on it to test this novel new hypothesis."—Günther Kletetschka Kletetschka is a geophysicist at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center. Stephen Berry Berry is James Franck Distinguished Service Professor Emeritus, Department of Chemistry, University of Chicago. Science tells us with some precision that the universe is 26.8 percent dark matter, 68.3 percent dark energy, and only 4.9 percent ordinary matter but most confess that it doesn't really know what dark matter is and knows even less about dark energy. The essay is definitely of the former kind."—R. Science is increasingly pointing toward an infinite universe but has no ability to explain what that really means. And what makes his presentation more compelling than other efforts I've encountered is his ability and willingness to weave personal experience into the thoughts and ideas presented. And I like to see books published that challenge my own ideas and thoughts in ways that make me think, but not ones that simply throw dogma at me. His style is conversational and warm which tends to pull you along through the exposition gently. The biocentrism theory isn't a rejection of science. Can science bring biology into grand unified theory? ... From the way [Lanza] chooses to present his arguments, it's clear he has a solid grasp of esoteric disciplines like quantum theory, special relativity and particle physics. We can go about our daily lives and continue to study the physical Universe as if it exists as an objective reality (because the probabilities allow that degree of confidence), but we do so with a better awareness of an underlying biological component, thanks to Dr. Lanza. Science describes life as a random occurrence in a dead universe but has no real understanding of how life began or why the universe appears to be exquisitely designed for the emergence of life. "As an astrophysicist, I focus my attention on objects that are very large and very far away, ignoring the whole issue of consciousness as a critical part of the Universe. Robert Lanza has come up with an innovative approach to investigate reality from the viewpoint of biology. To put what you are doing in a larger context, it exhibits a dramatic new Copernican reversal. Bravo."—Michael Lysaght Lysaght is Professor of Medical Science and Engineering at Brown University and Director of Brown's Center for Biomedical Engineering. Time and space do depend on perception. It provides books in nearly a dozen languages. 625 E. But that was just the beginning. Issues of "quantum weirdness" do have a place in the macroscopic world. Yes, it is appropriate to ask how it happened that the conditions worked out to be just right for life to appear somehow on earth and then to evolve from the archaean to the eukaryotes to us. He is Professor Emeritus at the University of Washington and Director Emeritus of the Clinical Research Division at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center. He is currently with the Astroparticle Physics Laboratory, and has received both the Goddard Space Flight Center & NASA Group Exceptional Achievement Awards. I think this is a great project."—Ronald Green Green is the Eunice and Julian Cohen Professor for the Study of Ethics and Human Values, and Director of Dartmouth College's Ethics Institute. In Beyond Biocentrism, acclaimed biologist Robert Lanza, one of TIME magazine's "100 Most Influential People in 2014", and leading astronomer Bob Berman take the listener on an intellectual thrill ride as they reexamine everything we thought we knew about life, death, the universe, and the nature of reality itself. His contributions include the building and flying of prototypes of EGRET, which was launched by the Space Shuttle Atlantis in 1991. Concepts such as time, space, and even causality are increasingly being demonstrated as meaningless. The idea that consciousness creates reality has quantum support, as you suggest, and also coheres with some of the things biology and neuroscience are telling us about the structures of our being. Professor Green is a well-known religious studies scholar and former Chairman of the Department of Religion "Robert Lanza, a world renowned scientist who has spanned many fields from drug delivery to stem cells to preventing animal extinction, and clearly one of the most brilliant minds of our times, has done it again. A solution is suggested that involves a new concept, biocentrism. Scientists work to acquire objective answers from the infinity of space or the inner machinery of the atom. Almost every society of mankind has explained the mystery of our surroundings and being by invoking a god or group of gods. If you love to visit brick and mortar stores Schoenhof's Foreign Books Inc. Not all will agree with the proposition he advances, but most will find his writing eminently readable and his arguments both convincing and challenging. He was also former Vice President of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and MacArthur Prize "Genius" Fellow. The first step is acknowledging that our existing model of reality is looking increasingly creaky in the face of recent scientific discoveries. I am very familiar with some of the things you say. Biocentrism challenges us to fully accept the implications of the latest scientific findings in fields ranging from plant biology and cosmology to quantum entanglement and consciousness. By listening to what the science is telling us, it becomes increasingly clear that life and consciousness are fundamental to any true understanding of the universe. He is also a Research Professor of Physics at Catholic University of America and leading scientist working on the James Webb Space Telescope. Bob Lanza is to be congratulated for a fresh and highly erudite look at the question of how perception and consciousness shape reality and common experience.
